SUMMARY OF NEW RESEARCH FINDINGS

This thesis is a piece of research which systematically and thoroughly works on the prevention of the crime of resisting persons in the performance of their official duties during the current period in Vietnam by using a combination of different research methods and being conducted in an independent, careful and serious manner. New contributions of the thesis to the scientific knowledge are as follows:

Firstly, the thesis has clearly analyzed the real situation of the crime of resisting persons in the performance of their official duties in Vietnam from 2005 to 2015. The analytical process has been carried out effectively concerning all the degrees of the crime (from cleared crime to unreported crime) and the nature of crime (both structure and the nature of crime), as well as their development during the 10-year period of 2005-2015.

Secondly, the thesis has basically analyzed and explained the main causes of the crime of resisting persons in the performance of their official duties in Vietnam from 2005 to 2015. Those are causes relating to socio-economic conditions, drawbacks in the State management on social orders, in the law enforcement process, and in propaganda campaigns to educate the public to abide by the laws. Besides, there are causes from both sides - the victims (the persons in the performance of their official duties) and the criminals.

Thirdly, the thesis has recommended a number of realistic solutions to the crime of resisting persons in the performance of their official duties in Vietnam for the next few years. Those highly possible solutions promise to alleviate the current situation of the crime of resisting persons in the performance of their official duties in Vietnam, taking part in the maintenance of law and order, increasingly economic growth and improved social development.
